¹ Murzin, Leonid Nikolaevich (27.05.1930 – 13.10.1996), Ph.D., Prof., is one of the fathers of modern derivatology, a science that studies processes of forming new linguistic units. He was a student of Prof. A.N.Gvozdev and worked in Perm State University since 1962. He was the first Head of General and Slavic Linguistics Department (1982-1996). He is the founder of Perm school of derivatology and is known for his works on theory of derivation, text linguistics, and linguadidactics.
